

Modules: What are they?

Last Updated Monday, 09 April 2007

Description:

Modules are smaller elements within the Joomla! structure, used to display retrieved database data, information items, or interactive features throughout a Joomla! web site.

There are two types of Module:

- Site Modules - These are used to provide functionality for the Front-end of the web site.
- Administrator Modules - These are used to provide functionality for the Back-end of the web site.

The main characteristics of the Modules in both instances are determined by pre-established positions, set within Site and Administrator templates. Each Module also has its own configurable settings that are accessible via either the Site, or Administrator, Module Manager=>module_name.

Examples of Modules that can be developed are Menus, Login Forms, and Search forms.

Joomla! is installed with a number of Modules, please see the Related Information section below for details.

Creating new Modules

Simple HTML Modules can be created directly within the Module Manager using the Custom User Module. For more complex functions the Modules will need to be developed externally and then installed via the appropriate Module Manager.

Further details on creating Modules for Joomla! visit the Joomla! Developers Portal <http://dev.joomla.org> where you will also find the Developer Documentation Work Group.

Third Party Modules

There are literally hundreds of Modules (over 600 @ Jan 2007) - along with Components, Mambots, and templates - already programmed for Joomla! These have been written by various Joomla! community members. You will find them on the Joomla! Extensions Directory, <http://extensions.joomla.org> .

Generally these are free and available for download. There are also some of the more specialised Modules that are available Commercially for a charge.
